BERGERAC SOUTH WEST, FRANCE

The Bergerac wine-growing region is a subregion of South West France in the Dordogne department. Like all the best wine regions, Bergerac combines all the right conditions for great vineyards. The warmth of the Aquitaine and the temperate climate of the Dordogne River; the hillsides and plateaus, which provide maximum sunshine and perfect drainage; the poor quality rocky limestone soils that force the vines to work harder. All these factors produce wines with wonderful flavors and aromas.

In Bergerac, wine making is 2,000 years old; and it's the many generations of vine-growers that have cultivated the process into an art. Today, vine-growers combine the legacy of tradition with the most recent innovations in oenology. Great effort has been put into improving the quality and the techniques used during the grape-harvest, wine-making, maturing and bottling at the property using the latest natural processes.

DESIGNATION

BERGERAC ROUGE | BERGERAC, FRANCE

VARIETY

80 % Merlot, 20% Cabernet Franc

VINEYARD

From a 10 hectare, sustainably-farmed, hill top parcel planted in diverse clay-limestone soils.

PROCESS

Hand-harvested, carefully sorted and fermented in temperature-controlled tanks. Daniel Hecquet traditionally ages his red wines in French oak barrels, approximately 50% new depending on vintage.

TASTING

Rich in color with garnet reflections and intense aromas of red fruits. The beautiful tannic structure presents a supple mouth feel that supports both youthful drinking along with the ability to age.

WINERY

Château Puy-Servain, located high in the Montravel and Bergerac appellations, is owned by Daniel Hecquet— one of the regions best and most innovative winemakers. Daniel is an accomplished oenologist, having honed his skills while working at Château d'Yquem and Chateau Figiac before returning home to Puy-Servain.
